YANGON, Myanmar - According to a leaked government order, Myanmar's military junta has commanded its staff not to receive any notices from international courts attempting to prosecute junta leaders.

According to the directive issued on Monday, the staff cannot accept any letters from the International Criminal Court (ICC) or the Argentinian Federal Court, both of which have opened cases against regime leaders for genocide and other significant crimes against humanity.

Last month, Argentina's justice system agreed to investigate charges that coup leader Min Aung Hlaing and five other top generals committed war crimes during military operations targeting Rohingya Muslims in 2017.

On December 16, the Burmese Rohingya Organization UK had its first hearing in the matter, which featured testimony from the group's chair, Tun Khin.

"The evidence against Min Aung Hlaing and the Myanmar military is overwhelming and irrefutable. They must answer for their crimes," Khin was reported as saying.

"It is important to remember that this is not just about the Rohingya people's quest for justice, but for all people of Myanmar who have suffered at the hands of the military, not least since the coup this year," Tun added.

Another rights organization, the Myanmar Accountability Project (MAP), announced earlier this month that it had presented evidence to the International Criminal Court (ICC) of crimes committed by Min Aung Hlaing since he seized power in February.

"The leader of the illegal coup is criminally responsible for the security forces under his command committing mass atrocity crimes," Chris Gunness, the director of MAP, said.

"The prospects of a conviction are good, and we believe that grounds for issuing an arrest warrant against Min Aung Hlaing are overwhelming," Chris added.
